Attendance Institute Resources Order Form

The Attendance Institute's resources are designed to give school administrators handy reference points on a wide variety of critical state and federal education issues. Our resources, which can include professional development, are prepared by content experts with decades of school-management experience and offered both in print and online.

Online Publication

K-12 Daily was launched in July, 2008 to help fill a void in news coverage critical to the education community. Staffed by a team of veteran journalists and assisted by an editorial board of content experts from the public school system, K-12 Daily reaches more than 10,000 readers daily with correspondents in four of the country's regional centers as well as Washington D.C.

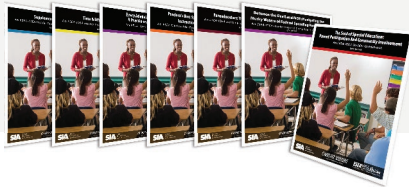

K-12 Daily is intended to serve as an objective window to the debate over how best to improve student performance. Published daily, our reporting is aimed at an audience of educators, school administrators and policy-makers.
